VLADIMIR PUTIN President of the Russian Federation

The St. Petersburg meetings have become a good tradition. We value the Forum's atmosphere of trust and openness. Such a discussion and an informal dialogue are particularly important today when the environment for doing business and making investments, as well as everyday life, going through dynamic changes too.

SHINZŌ ABE Prime Minister of Japan

The slogan of our Forum this year is 'Building a Trust Economy.' It is my belief that we can deem Japan and Russia as together engaged in building this economy of trust.

ANTON KOBYAKOV

Advisor to the President of the Russian Federation, Executive Secretary of the SPIEF Organizing Committee

This year, the Forum has come to resemble a crossroads of civilizations. Only at SPIEF has everything been put in place to ensure that discussions are open, as opposed to politically charged. It is where participants from various countries and growing economies discuss economic issues. There is no place in the world other than SPIEF that provides such an opportunity, which is why we have seen the numbers of participants grow from year to year.

EMMANUEL MACRON President of France

This dialogue was extremely open, direct, and effective. It was also very productive. I think that it enabled us to have a truly honest exchange of views on the world and the future as they are held in Russia and in France right now. We also talked about our obligations and our responsibilities.

WANG QISHAN Vice President of the People's Republic of China

We are determined to further deepen broad-ranging cooperation with our Russian partners, and develop a comprehensive strategic relationship and partnership in the spirit of equality, trust, mutual support, and longstanding friendship

CHRISTINE LAGARDE Managing Director of the International Monetary Fund

In supporting international institutions, world leaders, many of whom are here today, shoulder a responsibility not only to speak, but also to back up their words with action, as we too are planning to do.

EMMANUEL FABER Chairman and CEO, Danone

One of the major advantages of a Forum of this size is the opportunity to talk without always needing to agree. I believe that world leaders should agree to start listening to one another, thereby establishing new contacts and restoring old ones. All of us, and leading business figures in particular, should take personal responsibility for what is happening around us. The world will only change when each of us changes.

ROBERT DUDLEY Group Chief Executive, BP

I have witnessed the evolution of SPIEF from a small regional conference to one that takes place on a global scale. I attend SPIEF for its sessions, but also for business meetings. It is a very productive period in my professional calendar.
